EMPLOYEES, MANAGEMENT OF ROHM & HAAS HONORED BY AWARDING OF THE ARMY-NAVY "E" FOR HIGHEST STANDARDS OF PRODUCTIVE ACTIVITY IN WAR CONTRACTS

Presentation of Award Witnessed by Several Thousands —
Brigadier General Franklin O. Carroll Represents the Army, While Lt. Commander O. R. Sutherland,
U. S. N., Presents the Merit Pins

The Army-Navy "E" Pennant was awarded the employees and management of Rohm & Haas Company of Bristol, at a program witnessed by several thousand individuals yesterday afternoon.

The "E" Pennant, denoting excellence in achieving the highest standards of productive activity in the fulfillment of government war contracts, was presented on behalf of the U. S. Army by Brigadier General Franklin O. Carroll, Chief, Experimental Engineering Section, Wright Field, Dayton, O.; and the speech of acceptance was by Otto Haas, president of Rohm & Haas Company.

Individual merit pins were presented by Lt. Commander O. R. Sutherland, U. S. N., Philadelphia, they being accepted by the following on behalf of their co-workers in various departments of the plant: Leonard Simons, Peter Hoffman, August Benz, Miss Dorothy Myers, Miss Katherine Wachter, and Miss Dorothy Quinn. The pins are to be worn by each individual employee of the firm, they being emblematic of the highest achievement in productive efforts.

Serving as master of ceremonies was Lt. Willis J. Goedert, of the U. S. Army.

The ceremony marked a highlight in the work of the employees of Rohm & Haas Company, who by devotion to duty and contribution to the war effort of the nation, gained the honor and distinction bestowed upon them at yesterday's ceremony.

At the outset of his remarks, in opening the program of the afternoon, Lt. Goedert reminded that the women and men of the honored firm "have joined the ranks on the production front, so they might work in harmony with and back up the men on the firing line."

He called upon the Rev. John Robbins Hart, Ph. D., rector of Washington Memorial Chapel, Valley Forge, for the invocation.

In his speech of presentation, Brigadier General Carroll expressed pleasure "in the honor of being called upon to honor you in a work well done."

He dwelt at length on the manner in which products made by Rohm & Haas Company are applied to the war effort, drawing particular attention to streamlined Plexiglas noses and turrets which the company is turning out in large quantities, and which are said by aviation experts to give U. S. warplanes "an advantage not held by planes made in other countries."

The speed with which they are being produced has repeatedly been commended by Army and Navy officials. A Plexiglas nose and turret were displayed upon the platform yesterday, and attention of the huge assemblage which gathered in the new storage building for the program was drawn to these as Brig. Gen. Carroll spoke. He stated: "You are furthering the war effort in a fine way," and at this juncture he quoted excerpts from letters written by former Rohm & Haas company employees who are now on far-flung battle fronts. One of these young men told of his pride in seeing bombers take off from his base, the men flying in them having the knowledge of their fine advantage because of the Plexiglas parts.

THE WAR AT A GLANCE

By International News Service

Germany observed the tenth anniversary of the rise of Adolf Hitler to power today and by no stretch of the imagination could it be called a celebration. It was a dreary day in the Reich as the Russians announced another great victory over Axis armies on the Voronezh front where seven divisions were encircled and faced annihilation.

In North Africa Allied forces moved into position for all-out assaults on the German-Italian armies, and American heavy and medium bombers all but obliterated the East Tunisian port of Sfax in a devastating assault.

There was little in the war news to cheer the Reich, and its radio comment reflected the discouraging nature of recent developments. So heavy was the spirit of pessimism hanging over the country like a pall that Hitler was not scheduled to speak.

Usually he marks the day with a bombastic, breast-beating address, calling on the world to witness that he wanted peace, but since war came he will surely and quickly defeat his foes "in the decadent, Jewish-run democracies of the world."

But the schedule of the day called for no Hitler address. Instead, Dr. Joseph Goebbels, wizen propaganda minister, was to read a proclamation by the Fuehrer beginning at 4 p. m. in Berlin (11 a. m. New York eastern war time).

Reich Marshal Hermann Goering was to take the air earlier, at 6 a. m., Eastern War Time.

A Soviet special communique, announcing rout of an Axis Army of more than 100,000 north of Voronezh practically ruined the day for the Nazis. In a three-day battle the Red armies reported routing the enemy from more than 200 towns in an advance that carried 25 to 30 miles along a 44-mile front.

More than 12,000 Axis troops were slain and 14,000 captured. Retreat of the remnants of the shattered divisions was cut off by Russian columns which swept to the rear of the Axis positions in rapid thrusts and encircled the defeated forces.

Great quantities of booty fell to the victors. Russian spearheads were reported within 65 miles of Kursk and within 90 miles of Orel as the offensive widened.

In the Caucasus the rail town of Kropotkin, 130 miles south of Rostov, was captured after bitter fighting and the Soviet columns began pushing north toward Tikhoretsk, 35 miles away.

German depression was believed due in large part to the emphatic statement by President Roosevelt that the war could end only with "unconditional Continued On Page Four

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON THE NEW AIR RAID SIGNALS

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS No. 2

Following is the second part of a series of "Questions and Answers," which give some pertinent facts about the new air raid warning signals and blackout regulations issued by the Eastern Military Area, which comprises 16 Atlantic seaboard states and the District of Columbia.

16. Q. What does "Blue" and "Red" mean in connection with air raid warnings?

A. "Blue" refers to the signal which is given when enemy planes are within striking distance and headed in your direction—attack is probable. "Red" refers to the signal which is given when the planes are practically overhead—attack is imminent.

17. Q. How will I recognize these "Blue" and "Red" signals?

A. The "Blue" signal is the steady sound of a siren, horn or whistle for approximately two minutes. The "Red" signal is the series of short blasts of the horn or whistle or the warbling or fluctuating sound of a siren for approximately two minutes. The second "Blue" signal is, of course, the same as the first—a steady sound of approximately two minutes' duration.

18. Q. What do I do as an ordinary civilian when the "Blue" signal is sounded?

A. Blackout your home or business. If you are a pedestrian, continue about your affairs. If you are driving, switch your lights to low-beam and proceed with caution. Consider getting to a shelter if a "Red" signal should follow.

19. Q. What do I do as an ordinary civilian when the "Red" signal is sounded?

A. Get to shelter immediately if you are walking. If you are driving, pull over to the side of the street and stop your car, put out the lights and go to shelter immediately. On the "Red" signal all road vehicles and street cars stop except for properly identified emergency vehicles, which may proceed with low-beam headlights.

20. Q. What do I do as an ordinary civilian when the second "Blue" is sounded?

A. Do exactly as you did on the first "Blue" signal. You may leave your Continued On Page Four

William Hoagland, Colored, Killed in Hit-Run Accident

Bristol police were asked to notify the wife of William Hoagland (colored), of the death of a motor accident in New Jersey on Thursday night. New Jersey officials were of the opinion that the wife of the deceased resided in Bristol.

Hoagland's lifeless body was found about two miles from Burlington, N. J., on the Burlington-Mt. Holly Road, at 10 o'clock, Thursday evening. Death, according to Coroner John Coates, of Florence, N. J., was due to a fracture of the skull. It is believed that the man was the victim of a hit-run accident.

No clues have been found yet which might lead to identity of the driver of the car, state New Jersey State Police at Riverton barracks.

Hoagland's body was found by a passing motorist, and was removed to a Burlington funeral home.

When struck, Hoagland was said to have been walking from a farm where he had done some carpenter work to the Patane farm where he was employed and resided.

MRS. IRENE SILPETH IS FOUND DEAD AT HOME

Discovery Made by Young Woman Who Resided At The Silpeth Residence

NATIVE OF BURLINGTON

A Bristol woman was found dead on the floor of her bedroom at three o'clock this morning.

The victim is Mrs. Irene Silpeth, 335 Radcliffe street, and her death was discovered by Miss Katherine Beasley, a young woman who occupied a room in the Silpeth residence.

Mrs. Silpeth had not been in the best of health during the past two weeks, and had been under the care of a physician.

It is presumed that she was in the act of retiring for the night when stricken.

It was Mrs. Silpeth's custom to retire and listen to the radio, Miss Beasley frequently turning the radio off upon her return from her employment at Rohm & Haas Co. plant. At three o'clock this morning when Miss Beasley returned to the Silpeth residence, she entered Mrs. Silpeth's room as was her custom, and stumbled over the body. Miss Beasley ran to the front door and summoned assistance.

Bristol police were called, and Deputy Coroner of Bucks County, J. Alfred Rigby, Cornwells Heights.

Mrs. Silpeth was a native of Burlington, N. J., and had resided in Bristol for the past 22 years. She was 73 years of age, and is survived by one son, John, of Camden, N. J.; four grandchildren; and three great grandchildren.

Mrs. Silpeth had held a telephone conversation with her daughter-in-law in Camden yesterday afternoon, in latter planning to come to Bristol to visit Mrs. Silpeth this week-end.

DEDICATE TABLET HONORING THOSE IN COUNTRY'S SERVICE

Handsome Bronze Plaque Is To Be Placed in Hall of High School

NAMES TO BE ADDED

Tablet is Gift of Girl Reserves and The Hi-Y
Boys

A handsome bronze tablet which will eventually contain names of all Bristol high school pupils (former or present students) who are serving or will serve in the present war, was dedicated yesterday afternoon at a special assembly program held in the high school auditorium.

The tablet, measuring about 48 by 36 inches, will, it is believed, contain names of more than 100 young men and women. Several score former pupils are already in the service, and more are soon to be called.

The tablet is the gift of the Girl Reserves and the Hi-Y boys. It was presented to the Student Body on behalf of the Reserves and Hi-Y. Presentation was made by Louis Galzerano, president of the Hi-Y Club, and the plaque was accepted on behalf of the Student Council by Paul Ruby, council president.

The program, in charge of Louis Galzerano, included patriotic selections by the high school band, devotional program led by Reba Corn, president of the Girl Reserves; dedicatory prayer by the Rev. W. E. Preston Haas, pastor of Bristol Methodist Church; remarks by Superintendent of Bristol public schools, Warren P. Snyder.

The tablet will be permanently installed in the third floor corridor, opposite the office of Principal David Hertzler, and will be illuminated during school hours.

Miss Marion E. Peck is advisor of the Girl Reserves, and John Burris is advisor of the Hi-Y boys; the groups donating the tablet.

WHAT OUR BOYS ARE DOING TO WIN THE WAR

Cadet Wayne Kennard Warner and his fellow navigator students from Pennsylvania received a preview of Naval Forces Course under the direction of Group Adjutant Howard J. McAllduff. They will soon finish their nine weeks' course at Pre-flight School (Navigator) Selman Field, Monroe, La., and will then enter Advanced Navigation School. Upon graduation therefrom, they will become Navigators with silver wings.

Success in modern warfare requires the close coordination of land, sea, and air forces. Therefore, in order to insure as high a degree of teamwork as possible the training program of the Pre-flight School for Navigators at Monroe includes instructions in Naval Forces and Operations. This course is concerned primarily with the coordination of naval and aerial units and is thus designed to convey a knowledge of types of naval vessels and supporting aircraft, along with the manner of their employment.

To make the course both practical and interesting, an Operations Demonstration Board is utilized. The board, several feet in length and width, is varied to suit the type of problem presented.

It is designed as a model ocean upon which model ships ranging in size from tiny one-inch submarines to heavy battleships and aircraft carriers are able to "maneuver" and "deploy." Scale model aircraft of various types provide the air arm for the fleets involved. Variety of action demonstrated ranges from an old type "battle line" deployment to the latest "Midway Island" method of attack.

The picture portrays a large scale fleet action involving battle lines with supporting surface and aerial units. The two fleets are composed of battleships, cruisers, destroyers, aircraft carriers, and submarines. All in all, well over 60 units are employed by both sides. Salvoes of heavy shells are fired from the battleships at the enemy battle line far over the horizon. Fast liners maneuver madly as they attempt to outflank and outfire the enemy.

Cadet Warner is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Webster Warner, 229 Washington street, Bristol, Pa. He attended the Pennsylvania State College and University of Alabama. He is a member of the Arch Club and the Sigma Nu fraternity. Before entering the Army, he was an Analytical and Water Chemist for the Pennsylvania Department of Health.

HEADS AND HEARTS

It was De Quincy who told his chef to serve him "heads, hearts, lights and tripe more frequently, of which you know I am very fond."

Experts declare that these neglected and nourishing portions were once considered royal fare. Of late years they have been bought by restaurants but rarely by housewives. Ignorance, it is now declared, is at the bottom of the failure of the average cook to practice economy and good eating at the same time.

Now, with a scarcity of meat, a little attention paid these lowly organs will return good dividends in enjoyment and nourishment. For the family meal the beef heart is the best buy because it supplies the greatest quantity.

A mutton or lamb's heart makes a generous serving for one person. A calf's heart will serve two people adequately. For filling there is a choice of chicken livers, bacon, mushrooms or meat savages with plenty of seasoning.

Tripe has a peculiar reputation. It is found at the bottom and at the top of the social ladder, but not in between. Restaurants have become famous for their methods of cooking and serving tripe. Poor families have always considered it a mainstay. But the everyday cook in a middle-class household knows it not.

Liver is an old stand-by in the American home, although beef and lamb livers are looked down upon by the liver of the calf, which has been elevated to a special position in the food world. The lower livers can also be made appetizing.

It's now or never for De Quincy's heads, hearts, lights and tripe in the American kitchen. In days after the war rationing will be a half-forgotten memory, there may be plenty of chops, steaks and roasts to dull the imagination of the cooks of the nation.

WINTER VALEDICTORY

For the first time in its 307 years, Harvard University held its graduation exercises in mid-winter this year. Of its 3,300 undergraduate students 1,600 are leaving soon for the Army or the Navy. This marks the conversion of Harvard from a college devoted to the arts of peace to an establishment primarily concerned with the needs of war.

Of the students who listened to President Conant's brief talk, 1,000 were already in the uniforms of the military or naval reserves. Many other, members of the freshmen, sophomore and junior classes, will be in uniform within a short time. Doctor Conant said to them:

"Formal education for the present you leave aside, but you will grow in wisdom nonetheless. New knowledge will come to you by virtue of the sacrifices that you will be asked to make. Having been ready to run all risks for freedom, you will comprehend it as those of us at home cannot."

Dr. Conant also reminded the students that colleges all over the nation are growing smaller than the Army and Navy may become larger. Harvard University is just one example of the change which has swept the country since Pearl Harbor.

It seems strange, in the face of the cheerful and eager response of most of the young men of today, to look back a few years to that post-war college generation which embraced pacifism so strongly. Where are they now, those young people who were so sure that no cause was worth the cost of war.

they ask for just tools to do a job. And I know that you will give them a tool."

In presenting the "E" pennant, General Carroll told that it was given for "work well done. It represents not only what you have done, but what you can still do."

Otto Haas, president of the company, in his speech of acceptance, said that "The award represents the achievement of every man and woman in our company. If we have been able to emphasize the great accomplishment it represents it is because of you," he said as he addressed the workers in particular. "It also places upon us a responsibility to live up to the honor it confers upon us."

The pennant was raised to the top of a staff by Charles Rathke and Fred Bryner, members of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion. Other members of this post formed a guard of honor at the front of the speakers' platform.

L. Commander Sutherland, in presenting the insignia plus to the representative group of employees, gave a brief history of the Navy "E." He told of how the products of industrial firms are evaluated six months after such an award in order to determine if the pennant might be retained. "Every part of your plant merits the highest praise," he stated in conferring the individual honors. "Each and every one of you has a right to feel proud of the results."

Leonard Simons, president of Rohm & Haas Social Club, responded on behalf of the employees. He told that the award "does not find us satisfied with our record, but will see us ready to increase our effort. We will work with increased energy to supply the necessities of war."

The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Fr. E. Paul Baird, serving for the Rev. Fr. Joseph E. Murphy of St. Mark's parish.

The hall in which the ceremonies took place was profusely decked with American flags and with red, white and blue bunting. The Rohm & Haas band and glee club provided music for the occasion, the band furnishing accompaniment as the assembly sang "The Star Spangled Banner" as the American flag was raised at the start of the program. "America" was the closing selection.

Guests of honor were seated on the platform, and in a section provided at the front of the hall.

Amplifiers carried voices of the speakers to all parts of the building.

and Charlotte Straus, by her father, Harry Straus, 467 Mill street, Bristol. Charging that the defendant, Madeleine Mary Pidecon, operated a car owned by the defendant, Alfred D. Pidecon, in a manner so negligent and careless as to collide with a car being driven by Harry Straus on Route 13 about one mile east of Tullytown on January 26, 1941, the plaintiffs claim that this collision caused damages amounting to $125 to their car and that Anna and Charlotte Straus, who were passengers in the car, received bruises, contusions and shock.

Morrisville To Have Day Nursery School

This is the second venture of this type to be set up by the Morrisville schools. A similar project was carried out from November 16th to the Christmas holidays, more or less as an experiment. Due to the success of this project, the school feels that it is in a position to offer a service to the community which will make a contribution to the war effort.

Miss Adelaide Mason, instructor of home economics, will be general supervisor, assisted by volunteers from the Woman's Club and girls from the high school. If the response to this

War Stamp Sales Over $559,777,000

WASHINGTON, D. C.—According to a report released by the Treasury Department today, sales of War Savings Stamps totaled $559,777,000 for the period from May 1, 1941, through November, 1942.

Stamp sales have risen from less than three million dollars per month when they were first introduced to the public to an average of about fifty million dollars per month at the present time.

It is predicted that sales of War Savings Stamps will reach a new high during January and February as the result of a concentrated drive by the Treasury Department to get holders of more than one hundred million partially filled Stamp albums to complete these albums and convert them into War Bonds.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

"I'm not interested in his explanations and settlements. And he can tell me how to get rid of him quietly through you," I demurred.
"He can—but he won't. In fact, he refuses to give himself up before he's had his talk with you."

"Give himself up? But you said he hadn't killed Stoddard," I gasped.
"I'm putting it the wrong way. I should have said, he won't come out in the open—admit he was in his house when it happened and tell what he knows," Forrestall corrected himself. "To my mind it's the same thing though."

"Then you believe he's done it?" I insisted.
He passed his hand across his face wearily, and I noticed for the first time how drawn and tired he looked.
"I don't know. I wish I'd told the police of his presence the moment I heard of the murder," he said dejectedly. "But I didn't. And I'm paying for it now. Pettengill made me show him the hidden safe last night, and found the envelope with the directions for locating the radium—opened. So now he thinks I opened it—and maybe I'm the man he's looking for, I—or poor Rob's."

"I'm sure he doesn't think any such thing. He's only acting as if he did, to draw you out," I consoled him. "Roberts helped Bruce get away without asking you, didn't he?"

He hesitated a moment. "That's right."
"And he didn't throw the stone away—the uranium?"

"No, Bruce has it. He says he wrenched it out of the murderer's hand, and that he didn't see who the man was, in the darkness, but has a suspicion—or an idea of how to trap him." He stopped abruptly, with a tired motion. "We haven't the time to go over the whole story. You'll be relieved by your guests. Bruce can tell it to you. He's at his camp—the Burton camp—on Eagle Lake. Some forty miles from here. If you weren't a stranger, you'd know how to get there. But as it is—I've drawn you a map. You go out on the State Highway, and then follow this sketch."

He took a folded slip of paper from his vest pocket and handed it to me. "Leave before sunrise. Half past three, four at the latest. That'll take you there in time to be back before your people are up and about."

I took the paper mechanically and tucked it into the front of my dress. "But why the urgency? Why can't I drive out during the day?" I objected.

"You might be followed. Anyway, that's how Bruce wants it. I'd have taken you, only—since I'm a suspect—"

He left the sentence in the air. "Come on, let's join the others."

When we emerged from the lilac tunnel—on the far side, away from the house, where a crossing path would lead us reach the lawn—we ran smack into Inspector Pettengill, coming from the direction of the Burton house.

He looked altogether spick and span and happy in his Sunday best, with his hair shining from the recent ministrations of his barber; and his smile was more genial than ever.

"Why, look who's been hiding in the bushes!" he greeted us affably. "Hope you don't mind my butting in on your party, Miss Kay. But I was over to the Burton house, nosing around some more—never can tell what's been overlooked—and when I saw the crowd on your lawn from a window, I just couldn't resist coming."

"I'm glad you followed that impulse," I lied cheerfully. "That is, if you stop fibbing about what the impulse was. Any bet, it wasn't the crowd, but a glimpse of Mae's wonderful cakes."

"Well, I didn't see 'em, but I had an idea of how they'd be there," he acknowledged with a grin. "Your new son-in-law here too, Mr. Forrestall."

"Certainly. He's the reason for the crowd that tempted you." Forrestall said ironically. "Do you wish to meet him in public, or privately?"

"In public'll do, for on Sunday," the Inspector chuckled. "Just want to say bless you and good luck, and don't go trespassing in strange houses no more. That's all. You had a nice drive last night with your young man, Miss Kay?"

If the Inspector didn't wish to pursue a topic, he just didn't. I thought admiringly, and obediently launched into an account of my evening with Allan—the beauties of the moonlit shore and all the rest of the expected panegyric.

But I didn't get far. Sounds of a commotion, coming from the lawn, stopped all three of us in our tracks.

At first it was only a confused jumble of voices—a lot of people trying to out-talk each other. Then one voice topped all the others, and it ceased to be speech, became a series of weird moans, sobs, wails—steadily rising in the scale and culminating in a wild, abandoned shriek.

We stood rooted. I don't know if the Inspector and Forrestall glanced at each other. I only know I stared into the air, wide-eyed—and I didn't see the sun-drenched, blossom-heavy garden at all, but darkness, the ray of a flashlight playing on a wall—

Then I found myself diving through the shrubbery and racing toward the lawn.

Everyone there was talking and gesturing, and they all were clustered around a shrieking figure in their middle: Stella Avery.

Aunt Millie was holding her by one arm and her husband by the other, criss-crossed with welts and scratches—by the other, And she was fighting against them furiously, like a trapped animal, with kicks and snaps of her jaws.

At first glance all her rage and fury seemed directed against Dad, standing before her, legs apart, arms akimbo, transfixing her with an outraged glare.

But the nature of the thickly mouthed abuse with which she punctuated her hysterics showed the real object of Stella's attack to be Gala, who was leaning on the back of a chair a few steps behind Dad; deathly pale, but composed and proudly drawn up to her full height.

The scene really defied description, and the epithets used by Stella didn't bear repeating.

I could see Dad was talking. But I couldn't hear what he said, any more than I could make out the scandalized—or soothing—remarks of the others. Only when Stella Avery ran out of breath—and swear words—for a longish period at last, did

Women of Doylestown Red Cross Hear Annual Reports

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 30.—Reports were submitted this week at the annual meeting of the Doylestown Branch of the American Red Cross, showing the all-out war effort the women of this community are putting forth.

Mrs. Arthur M. Eastburn, who has served as chairman of the Doylestown Branch for some time, was re-elected to that office to carry on for another year.

Other officers elected include Mrs. William R. Mercer, first vice-chairman; Mrs. G. Thawley Hayman, second vice-chairman; Miss Helen L. Ryan, third vice-chairman; Herman W. Burgher, treasurer; Miss E. Gladys Hayman, recording secretary; and Mrs. Julian W. Gardy, corresponding secretary.

Directors of the branch include the following: Miss Anna M. Armstrong, Mrs. Henry Leroy Kister, Mrs. Henry Arnold Todd and Mrs. Walter Scheerer. Miss Helen L. Ryan took the chair and conducted the election after the report of the nominating committee had been submitted by Mrs. F. H. Clymer.

A balance of $1144.29 in the general fund was reported by Treasurer Herman W. Burgher in a comprehensive outline of the finances.

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)

Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

We thank Thee, O God, for Thy presence with our loved ones, wherever they may be. We are grateful for the fact that they cannot get from under Thy love. We are grateful for the fact that in whatever part of the universe they may be sent, Thou art always with them. Bless them, O God, and cause them to depend upon Thee more and more. Grant that they might feel themselves bound with Thee and with us, by the cord of love through Jesus Christ our Lord. In His Name we pray. Amen.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

America's mighty Flying Fortresses, which are blazing their name into indelible history on the war fronts of the world, roared on to the Grand Theatre screen yesterday. Starring Richard Greene, whom the British Army furloughed to make the picture, Carla Lehmann and, of course, the famed B-17's "Flying Fortress" is an inspiring drama of the skyways.

"Flying Fortress" embraces the regeneration of an American playboy, Jim Spence (Richard Greene's role),

Three branches of swing, vocal, instrumental and acrobatic, are said to be expertly combined with romance and comedy in "Give Out, Sisters," coming Sunday to the Grand Theatre.

BRISTOL THEATRE

"Boss of Big Town," starring John Littel and Florence Rice, is part of a double feature now playing at the Bristol Theatre. The other feature is Bill Boyd in "Twilight On The Trail," Rita Hayworth and Fred Astaire head the cast of Columbia's new musical, "You Were Never Lovelier," tomorrow at the Bristol Theatre, with Xavier Cugat and his orchestra, and Adolphe Menjou.

RITZ THEATRE

Lovely Brenda Marshall, now playing in "You Can't Escape Forever" at the Ritz Theatre, is one of Hollywood's best-dressed women, and is an ardent exponent of a small but smart wardrobe. A simple, well-tailored costume can serve as a basis for a complete wardrobe by an ingenious use of accessories.

A MESSAGE TO BRISTOL WOMEN

We believe that there are still available in Bristol a number of women who want to share in the great war-production program that is required to equip our country's fighting men.

There is no better way to put this desire into action than to help build airplanes and airplane parts. And you can do that right here in Bristol — at Fleetwings — where parts are being built for some of our country's best bombers and fighters.

You need no experience to qualify for your part as a soldier of production. No skill. We will train you in our sheet-metal school and pay you while training. After that you are transferred to regular factory jobs at substantially higher wages.

A MESSAGE TO BRISTOL MEN

Married men, with children, are also greatly needed for direct hire into the Fleetwings plant.

HOW TO APPLY

Both women and men can apply at the Fleetwings Personnel Office, Plant 2.

BRISTOL HIGH'S FAILURE TO SCORE ON FOULS LOSES TEAM'S CHANCE TO BE THE UNDISPUTED LEADERS

(By T. M. Jono)

MORRISVILLE, Jan. 30.—Bristol High threw away a wonderful opportunity to take undisputed possession of first place in the Lower Bucks County League by failing miserably on its foul shots as the Morrisville boys scored a close 27-25 victory, last night on the Robert Morris "gym" floor.

The story in the Bristol defeat is on the foul line. The Bunnies had twenty-one chances from the gift mark and made but five of these while on the other hand, Morrisville converted nine of their eighteen foul tries. There was no doubt that the game was rough from the start.

But there was no reason for the Bristol players failing so in their free shooting as Cordisco missed five out of six; Maag two out of four; Ruby three out of three; Simons four out of five; and Scancelli two out of three.

From the field, Coach Bartholomew boys outscored their rivals, 10 to 9, and played a better passing game than Coach "Jimmy" Doheny's Bulldogs. Doheny's boys were better on long shots but after grabbing the lead in the first period they kept it throughout and even staved off a last period rally by Bristol.

BRISTOL JAY VEES WIN OVER MORRISVILLE

MORRISVILLE, Jan. 30.—A strong second-half finish gave the Bristol jay vees a deserving 34-21 triumph over the Morrisville jay vees on the latter's floor last night in the preliminary game.

Bristol was in the lead most of the game as it handed the Morrisville boys their fourth defeat in 11 starts. The Bulldogs' jay vees startled the Bristolians with a rally in the second period which erased an early 10-3 Bristol lead and brought the count to 12-11 at half-time.

Fisher and Mandio led in Bristol's scoring, with 13 and 8 points, while Walker was high for Morrisville with four field goals.

Raid Tunis Airfield and Bizerte

Allied Headquarters in North Africa—Allied bombers last night raided the Tunis airfield and the harbor of Bizerte, an official communique said today. Targets in the Bizerte dock area and a ship were hit. Bombers also attacked a heavily escorted southbound convoy between Sicily and Tunisia and scored hits on two vessels, the statement continued. During the attacks the bombers and escorting fighters shot down eight enemy aircraft. Four Allied planes failed to return, the communique went on, but four enemy bombers were destroyed last night. The ground situation is unchanged, the statement concluded.

Bomb German Submarine Base

London — RAF bombers roaring across the English Channel last night again attacked the German submarine base at Lorient on the French coast, the British Air Ministry announced today in a communique. Extent of the raid was not indicated in the brief bulletin which merely added that four of the British planes were missing following the attack.

Jeanette Strawn, Riegelsville, was inducted on October 8th and reported for duty on October 12th. He is now stationed with an Infantry unit at Camp Atterbury, Ind.

surrender" of the Axis powers. Hitler recently was reported to be sending out peace feelers and it had been expected that he might throw out a peace offer in an anniversary speech today. But the Roosevelt statement made it clear that such an offer would be a waste of time—that peace will come when the Axis is beaten and on terms established by the Allied victors.

Another evidence of firm Allied policy was seen in the announcement in Washington and Rio de Janeiro of the matters discussed by President Roosevelt and President Vargas of Brazil Thursday when the two chief executives met to plan future war moves.

Never again will the Axis powers be permitted to threaten the Americans with blockade or invasion from Dakar and other African ports. This was taken as evidence of Allied determination to establish a lasting peace and maintain it, if necessary by policing strategic areas such as Dakar, Singapore and other military bases from which the democracies could be attacked.

Allied forces in New Guinea were reported in pursuit of Japanese contingents which failed in an attack on Allied positions near Mubo, only ten miles south of Lae. The enemy suffered heavy casualties and withdrew after failing to penetrate our outposts.

Our bombers hammered Japanese airfields at Gasmata and Cape Gloucester on New Britain Island in continuing attacks on those areas.

Japanese prisoners were said to have confirmed reports that Lieut. Gen. Tomotomi Horii, who commanded the Papan invasion army, had been drowned trying to cross a river in the Owen Stanley Mountains last November.

tion of activity, enemy planes merely flying in the general vicinity without dropping bombs could freeze production and transportation for long periods of time.

27. Q. Why is no audible All-Clear "White" signal specified?

A. Due to the mechanical limitations of noise-making equipment and the fact that such warning equipment is not uniform throughout all the communities. Sirens, for illustration, can make only two sounds that are clearly distinguishable—the steady even note and the fluctuating or wailing note.

28. Q. Why is the signal system not based on a scheme of time interval between signals or on a definite sequence of signals?

A. Such systems are impracticable. The enemy will not conform to them—he will endeavor to gain surprise. No detection system is perfect. Consequently, the system adopted must be sufficiently flexible to meet any action that the enemy may take. Our first information of an air raid may demand a "Red" signal, as time will not be available for a "Blue." We must be prepared to meet any conditions and avoid impractical rigid signal rules or systems.
